Steven

I thought you might like an introduction to David Rosenthal. He has done some work for us as a research fellow the last 3 months at Halo developing our clinical trial protocol, running our first blind/controlled trial of the technology, and analyzing the stroke rehabilitation application data/literature.

He is a Stanford 2012 graduate pre-med with diverse interests. He took the year off to pursue some classics post-baccalaureate work and some work at Mt Sinai before coming to Halo Neuroscience in June.

He did so well and was so impressive that I've asked him to continue to work with me on related projects for the next year but has some spare time to work in research or volunteer roles as he builds his med school profile.
