Maybe find a source for some proper countertops? Ikea will do fine but might be slow. We basically need like 10ft of white or butcherblock.

Unless the vintage store in astoria has marble that would work.

Cool Alex is on it--what about that granite from Build It Green you were thinking about as desk material?

See if the dimensions work. Maybe send alex over by subway and back via car service (Java in greenpoint is a good one from astoria to city)

Seems like the pieces are too small. Alex is researching white Formica.

Amol says check ikea. Or you could get a nice trip to queens out of this.

i think ikea will be the way to go-- the materials in Astoria aren't the right size. Looking now at this one: <http://www.ikea.com/us/en/catalog/products/50124084/#/20124085>

I will email Norman to make sure this will work and that they can cut it for the sink and for the smaller splash-guards. I'll hit you back asap with his answer and then we can see what Amol thinks.

Have a great trip-- have fun out there, dude!!
